

Were women born to work hard at home in order to get cuter?

construct #1:
Women should stay at home cleaning, while the men do the real job out there, because they have a bigger brain!

Stephen Jay Gould, in his essay "Women's Brains" compares the women and men's brain, and he concludes saying that women have a smaller brain, which make women less intelligent than men. Gould said that women have a smaller brain, this matters because he offending women, and he is also being stereotyped.

However

Women might not have the biggest brain but yet, women has been the most successful sex in the world. Women didn't just stay at home, they fought for rights and freedom. Now they have it and this means that stereotypes between men and women is disappearing, however the role of "housewife" is not only the women role, is also the men.

SO THE HARDER A WIFE WORKS, THE CUTER SHE LOOKS!

construct #2:
What does being a man means, in the mainly language?

"Being a Man" by Paul Theroux, he establish a meaning to the phrase Be a man: "Be stupid, be a soldierly, obedient, thinking." He believes that men are just following what society had thought them ultimately, what is at stake here is that males are following what society and history had thought them.

no woman wants to marry a man that follows what society says, "house work is for women only", these stereotypes in a world no man no woman wants to be there to make a man feel better, or to try to show that everything is right when everything its going wrong.

women has to be there for men to make them feel good about themselves (cited Erlich, in "About Men", mentions that "women are fragile but no one is as fragile as a man". Just like Erlich says that man are fragile, this means that women have to be there to take care of them, and be there to make them feel good.
